Background Information: The State of Wisconsin had an active Conservation Corps program from 1983 to 2003. Young adults participating in the program worked on projects on public lands to enhance the conservation and public enjoyment of natural resources, such as landscaping, site maintenance, lake or stream restoration, erosion control, construction of bridges, boardwalks and stairs, among many others. In addition to the enhancement to public lands, the program provided participants with educational opportunities, valuable life skills, and marketable work training. Senate Bill 648 and Assembly Bill 688 propose to reestablish the Wisconsin Conservation Corps program.
